ADF supports Australia Day in Sydney

Australian Defence Force personnel joined Australia Day crowds in Sydney to help celebrate our national day.

For the ship's company of HMAS Parramatta the day took on a greater significance when the ship replaced HMAS Adelaide as the backdrop for the 'Salute to Australia' on Sydney Harbour.

HMAS Adelaide, whose motto is 'United for the common good', had left Brisbane loaded with humanitarian stores as part of the Australian Government response to Tonga following the volcanic eruption on January 15.

Commander David Murphy, Commanding Officer of HMAS Parramatta, said it was an honour for the ship's company to join Sydney's Australia Day festivities.

"Australia Day is a great day to be in Sydney Harbour and see the community celebrating together," Commander Murphy said.

"The crew and I are very proud to step in on behalf of HMAS Adelaide, given her important mission to support our Tongan friends in the Pacific."

On the last note of Advance Australia Fair all eyes were lifted to the skies as a Royal Australian Air Force F-35A Lightning II aircraft provided a spectacular display.

The stealth fighter was flown by No. 2 Operational Conversion Unit pilot Flight Lieutenant Ross Bowman, who said it was a privilege to be part of the activities.

"Sydney Harbour is a great place to fly over and Australia Day provides a unique opportunity to do a display where I am actually looking up at Sydney Harbour Bridge," Flight Lieutenant Bowman said.

"Australia Day always brings in the crowds so it was good to be a part of today's celebrations."

The ADF Parachuting School's Red Berets parachute display team bought the day to a close, jumping over Sydney Harbour and landing in the waters near the Sydney Opera House as the crowds enjoyed a concert.

Committee meeting Eastlakes Gungahlin 1100 Thursday 3 March 2022

By Vice Admiral Jonathan Mead AO 30 October 2021

As Chief of the Nuclear Powered Submarine Taskforce my role is to advise Government on the optimal pathway to acquiring a fleet of nuclear-powered submarines for Australia. Nuclear-powered submarines will fundamentally change Australia's strategic personality in the maritime domain. They will allow us to hold potential adversaries at risk from a greater distance and influence their calculus of the costs involved in threatening Australia's interests. Nuclear -powered submarines have superior characteristics of stealth, speed, manoeuvrability, survivability, and almost limitless endurance compared to conventional submarines.

The 2020 Defence Strategic Update highlighted a rapid deterioration of the strategic environment of the Indo-Pacific region – Australia's region. Military modernisation is occurring at an unprecedented rate. Capabilities are rapidly advancing, and their reach is expanding. As a result, our technological edge is narrowing.

In response, the Government has outlined a commitment to develop a more capable military force that will allow us to continue to help shape the region's future trajectory in ways that support security and prosperity for all – Australians, our neighbours and partners. This includes a fleet of nuclearpowered submarines, the most technologically advanced underwater capability to ever be operated by the Royal Australian Navy. Managing the delivery of this capability is a vital task – one that has my absolute commitment and that I consider of the deepest importance in its contribution to the defence of Australia. The delivery of a project of this scale is a national endeavour. We must get this right – and to do so, we must have the right people, with the right skillsets, in the right places.

Since the announcement of the AUKUS enhanced trilateral security partnership, the Taskforce has grown in size, capacity and expertise. The multi-agency taskforce now comprises seven divisions: Capability, Executive, International Policy and Agreements, Program Delivery and Industry, Security, Technology, and Stewardship. We have recruited – and continue to recruit – the best and brightest minds in Australia to contribute to the delivery of this historic capability. Our people will be the key enablers of success for the nuclear-powered submarine program.

There has been much speculation about the nuclear-powered submarine program since its announcement on 16 September – which boat design will be selected? How much it will cost? When will construction commence? How long it will take? It is important to understand that acquiring a fleet of nuclear-powered submarines is a multi-faceted task and requires significant input from a wide range of stakeholders. It is not an overnight task. Australia has never undertaken a capability acquisition of this scale.

The 18-month period of intensive consultation, which has already commenced, is imperative. It is a defined period that will allow us to work through the key questions with experts in industry, academia and Australian nuclear organisations to inform the Government's decision on the future nuclear-powered submarine program.

What I can assure you is that this nuclear-powered propulsion technology is safe. The nuclear propulsion system used by the United Kingdom and the United States has an enviable track record of safety and security. Their respective nuclear-powered submarines have never experienced any reactor accident or release of radioactivity that has harmed humans or marine life. Our AUKUS partners have set and maintained an exemplary safety record operating their submarine nuclear reactors. Australia will ensure it replicates this safety record by leveraging both countries' decades of experience as responsible stewards of this technology. Safety is our absolute priority.

Further, the 'nuclear' in nuclear-powered submarines refers only to the propulsion power source of the boat. Australia will not seek to develop or acquire nuclear weapons. We remain committed to our obligation under the Non-Proliferation Treaty not to acquire nuclear weapons.

Looking ahead at the next 18 months, the Taskforce will work with our counterparts in the United Kingdom and United States to deliver key outcomes. We will establish a framework around nuclear stewardship and safety and further policy requirements. We will define the nuclear-powered submarine workforce, including domestic and international training and education opportunities, and identify industry, security and infrastructure requirements. We will determine timeframes, costs and supply needs – and we will select a submarine design.

The Government has outlined its intention to build these submarines in Adelaide. This is with the backing of a strong sovereign defence industry. We can only move forward and contribute more to our region's stability, security and prosperity if we commit to build a robust, resilient and internationally competitive Australian defence industrial base. This will advance Australia's economy and create and sustain thousands of Australian jobs.

I am focused on expeditiously delivering to Government an optimal pathway to acquire these nuclear-powered submarines. We must remain focused. We must deliver. We must remain committed to our mission to defend Australia and its national interests in order to advance Australia's security and prosperity for decades to come. That is mission success.

Bev Joce awarded Honorary Member for Life

Bev received the NAA's award of Honorary Member for Life on 3 February 2022 in recognition of her outstanding Service as the ACT Section's Social Secretary from 2005 to 2022 on a voluntary basis with her husband's (Don Joce) assistance.

During this lengthy period Bev demonstrated her dedication to the ACT Section by organizing various social functions throughout the year including barbeques, dinners, lunches and theatre nights as well as regular monthly get togethers at a take away shop attached to the Canberra Yacht Club on the banks of Lake Burley Griffin in between the Section's monthly meetings

She was the mainstay in organizing regular raffles at meetings and Monster raffles at our Christmas BBQ lunches which were held in her home's back garden. Meticulous records were kept with regard to the Christmas raffles to ensure that tickets sold were accounted for and she did the shopping for and packed the Christmas hampers which were stored in her care until the raffle was drawn. The setting of her garden was ideal and the effort put in by both Bev and Don to make the Section's members welcome is truly memorable.

Boost in support for ex-service organisations

Wednesday, December 15 2021

The Hon Andrew Gee MP Minister for Veterans' Affairs Minister for Defence Personnel

Ex-service organisations supporting veterans, war widows, partners and dependants of serving and ex-serving Defence personnel have received a funding boost from the Australian Government to help them continue their important work.

Australian Peacekeepers and Peacemakers Association, The War Widows' Guild and The Federation of Totally and Permanently Incapacitated (TPI) Ex Service Men and Women are among 14 organisations to receive up to $10,000 under the Grants-In-Aid Program.

Minister for Veterans' Affairs and Defence Personnel Andrew Gee said the extra funding will help with the day-to-day running of these organisations that work tirelessly in support of our veterans and their families.

"These groups play a vital role in the Defence and veteran community, providing wellbeing and welfare services to our veterans and their families, as well as being a place for creating social connections and fostering mateship," Minister Gee said. "Each organisation has their own projects and activities that will benefit from this Federal funding, with Buddy Up Australia using the money to offer an annual training camp to better inform leaders and mentors about the support services available.

"The Naval Association of Australia will use the funding to travel to key regional areas to meet with veteran groups and rebuild relationships that were disrupted due COVID-19.

"Now that COVID-19 restrictions are easing around the country, the funding will also help many important annual conferences resume in-person across the nation.

"I am committed to working closely with ex-service organisations and individuals that dedicate themselves to supporting the veteran community.

"Grants-In-Aid together with other programs such as the Veteran and Community Grants and the Support Younger Veterans Grants are an important part of the Australian Government's commitment to supporting the Defence and veteran community."

For more information, visit the Grants-In-Aid pro- gram on the DVA website.

Keeping an eye on space

Communications, remote sensing and precision navigation and timing for warships and submarines is becoming more and more important – and satellite technology is making the process that much easier.

The ADF is increasingly investing in satellite capabilities in space to allow Navy surface and subsurface vessels to better assess the maritime environment and respond to potential threats over the horizon.

Navy Information Warfare's Deputy Director Space Lieutenant Commander Ben Piggott said such capabilities and platforms provided Navy with a strategic advantage.

"Satellite communications is the only way to move a lot of information to and from ships and submarines quickly," Lieutenant Commander Piggott said.

"Remote-sensing satellites are important so that we can understand the environment beyond the range of our on-board sensors, and GPS is essential so that we can know where we are, target weapons accurately, and synchronise our communications.

"Defence is also exploring options for space electronic warfare to deter interference with our space systems."

Lieutenant Commander Piggott's comments come as Defence highlights its long-standing and diverse science-based capabilities as part of National Science Week, Australia's annual celebration of all things relating to science and technology held each year in August.

For Navy, it is an opportunity to highlight the ground -breaking work of its Information Warfare Space specialists – a relatively new qualification.

> A/SBLT Jack Meadows 18 August 2021

Sailors have navigated by the stars since the dawn of time, but now Navy is looking skyward to understand who is observing us.

Deputy Director of Space in the Navy Intelligence and Information Warfare Branch, Lieutenant Commander Ben Piggott, completed the Bundeswehr (German military) space situational awareness course last November.

"It was a great introduction to the fundamentals of how we can use radars and telescopes to collect data on what satellites are doing in space, then turning that data into a picture that we can use for military situational understanding of what is happening in space in the same way a ship's operations room has access to different sensors that can be used to form a picture that can be used to make decisions," Lieutenant Commander Piggott said.

Held in Luftwaffenkaserne (air force barracks) Wahn, near Cologne, the course introduced students to the fundamentals of space situational awareness.

It was made possible by a relationship the Bundeswehr has with the Technical University of Braunschweig.

The instruction was aimed at a first-year university level.

With a master's degree in space operations, Lieutenant Commander Piggott was one of 23 military and civilian delegates from around world on the course.

"We needed to get a sense of how worthwhile the training was, and the feasibility of sending more people in the future," Lieutenant Commander Piggott said.

"It is great to see how Germany and NATO operate in the space environment.

"I was able to make connections that have the potential to create some opportunities for Australia to establish mutually beneficial space technology partnerships with other countries in the future."

There are opportunities for Navy personnel to work in the newly established Space Command, with a number of new positions available.

Lieutenant Commander Piggott said he was excited for the "astonishing" amount of growth around the corner.

"Space systems like satellite communications, earth observation satellites, and GPS are fundamental to enabling our submarines, ships and aircraft to operate effectively – we can't deliver the full capability of our platforms without space," Lieutenant Commander Piggott said

Submissions

The Royal Commission has so far received more than 1,100 written submissions from individuals and organisations. The Commission is interested in hearing from people with lived experiences – whether currently serving in the Defence force, former members, or a family member or someone who is supporting them. All voices and stories are welcome.

These stories might not relate to suicide but could be about military service, mental health and individual experiences in the Defence force. The Commissioners want to discover themes and common experiences and identify ways to bring about real change for future serving and ex-serving Defence communities.

All submissions will be recorded, reviewed and used to inform the work of the Royal Commission. You can remain anonymous when you speak to the Commission.

We need to learn as much as we can about the issues and situations surrounding the deaths by suicide of serving and ex-serving Defence members. We can only do this with your help. We are here to listen, learn and then act, informed by the accounts and experiences of those impacted by suicide or suicidal thoughts.

Our strong commitment is to make sure this Royal Commission is about hearing the stories of those who have served or continue to serve who have experiences with suicide or suicidal thoughts. This includes the family members of those who have tragically lost loved ones. We will adhere to the principles of trauma-informed engagement and collaboration. We will monitor, learn from and strengthen our engagement approaches as the Royal Commission proceeds

The questions are whether we remedy our omission and whether we stay with the same charities. These questions will be put to members at the next General Meeting.

- Guest Speakers. Our General Meetings could be augmented by having a guest speaker talking about issues relevant to our interests. David spoke of the award of the bereavement medal and noted that CN had indicated a willingness to continue this practice following such requests by the families of naval personnel who had crossed the bar. LCDR Desmond Woods is the RAN liaison officer, and he could be considered for giving an address on this matter. Likewise, our newest member, Alaric O'Neill, has started work within DVA and he could be a prospect for informing us of his role in DVA. This will be a work in progress.
